Five ways to better wellbeing

Five small changes can make a big difference. These simple things have been shown to improve mental health and wellbeing.

1 Connect With people at home, at work, school or in your local community. Building connections with others can ease your troubles and help you see things in a different way.

2 Be active Walking, cycling, gardening – find an activity that suits you. Exercise can improve sleep, relieve tension, improve energy levels and help you think clearly.

Confidential talking therapies

Talking therapies involve talking with a trained professional to help you work out how to deal with negative thoughts and feelings. They can also boost your mood and motivation.

Talking therapies are as effective as medicines for many common mental health problems, such as low mood and worry. What's more, they create long-lasting positive changes so you not only feel better but stay better, putting you in control to get the most from life.

Talk Changes

A free NHS service for adults registered with a GP in City and Hackney. As well as regular face-to-face sessions, support is also available over the phone, online or in groups. The team includes specialist employment advisers if your wellbeing is affected by your job or unemployment.
